

Home Composting: From Trash to Treasure

Tuesday, May 19, 6 pm

S. White Dickinson Memorial Library/
Whately Public Library
202 Chestnut Plain Road
Whately, MA 01093

With Amy Donovan, Program Director at
Franklin County Solid Waste District

Free and open to all area residents.

Composting is a valuable way to reduce trash volume and costs, save money in your garden, and replenish garden soils. This presentation is free and open to all and will include easy how-to home compost instructions, tips for success, a demonstration of indoor worm bin composting, local resources to purchase low-cost compost bins and pails, educational handouts and yes/no guides, and information on how to participate in municipal or commercial composting.

Franklin County Solid Waste District manages recycling, composting, and hazardous waste programs for 21 member towns, including 17 municipal transfer stations franklincountywastedistrict.org.

Over the past 19 years, Amy Donovan has set up dozens of classroom worm compost bins, started over 25 school cafeteria compost programs, and established 16 municipal compost programs.
